Fairclough Language And Power

NORMAN FAIRCLOUGH shows that many interactions are 'unequal encounters'; that language choice is created and constrained by certain social 'power' situations or 'power type' discourse of kinds accepted as 'normal' for that kind of encounter, e.g. a manager/worker or doctor/patient conversation (or, in a text, the use of stereotypes or other ideological ideas).

How this is done is based largely on how language is used to naturalise the inequality of power relations within a society. Fairclough's point, then, and how the book ends, is to call for critical language analysis to be taught in schools so that students can see how language is used as an instrument of power in the interests of those in power so as to naturalise certain ways of understanding the world.
